Marlborough College has enjoyed a considerable reputation for small arms competition. The .22 rifle range has been an important part of the College's activities but had reached a point when its compliance with modern standards meant renewal was essential.

BH&M were commissioned to rebuild the existing facility as new to the latest standards on the existing site. The original corrugated iron shed was demolished and a new concrete and brick construction, with a modern rifle range to national competition standards, was completed. This would now be regarded as an exemplar for school small bore rifle competition.
