

Following the removal of the art school from the Court at Marlborough, a strategy that was generated by the desire to improve the staff's own facilities, the existing art department was refurbished to provide a new staff common room and meeting facilities. Located in the heart of the School, this 1980s building was completely refurbished providing a double height common room space as well as refreshment and recreational activities. The adjacent Grade II Listed Building was also used to provide new changing facilities in the basement.
